Persuasion was written between August, 1815 and August, 1816. During this time, Jane Austen began to suffer from the illness which would, in July of 1817 and at the age of 42, take her life.

you pierce my soul...

PERSUASION

She did not live to see its publication, which occurred in the year following her death. Persuasion and Northanger Abbey were published together by Miss Austen's brother, Henry Austen in 1818

It was he who chose the title for this novel, and unfortunately, we can never know what Jane herself might have named it.

It's never too late for true love.

ROMANTICISM

THE REGENCY ERA

Named after the Regent
George IV

1811 - 1820

He embodied the romantic figure:

“The first gentleman of England”

- Glamorous
- elegance
- Extravagant follies
- Romantic liaisons
- A period of low morals and high fashion

All her books are located in this period

Anne Elliot

27 + unmarried= spinster

There is a lot of Jane Austen in the portrayal of Anne.

Jane Austen is over 40 at that time and she's ill

Provides advice to spinsters:

"There is always hope and second chances".

Maturity

Psychological introspection

Persuasion

Melancholy
